Statewide Training Sessions for the In-Use Off-Road Diesel Vehicle Regulation

The Air Resources Board adopted a new regulation to reduce emissions from existing off-road diesel vehicles used in California in construction, mining, and other industries. The In-Use Off-Road Diesel Vehicle Regulation will reduce the public's exposure to cancer-causing exhaust and other pollution from diesel vehicles. The regulation requires fleet owners to retrofit, repower, or replace their off-road diesel-fueled vehicles gradually over the next decade.

To assist fleet owners with their compliance efforts, ARB staff is conducting a series of statewide training seminars on the regulation. These seminars will provide an in-depth presentation of the regulation and how to comply, as well as information about grant opportunities. In addition, participants will have an opportunity to speak one-on-one with providers of exhaust retrofit devices.

Following the general training session fleet owners will have the opportunity to meet with an ARB staff member and obtain training on the Diesel Off-Road On-Line Reporting System (DOORS). During these individual trainings staff will be available to show fleets how to enter their data into the DOORS system. These individual trainings are by appointment only and limited to 30 minutes.

Who Should Attend?

Any person, business, or government agency that owns or operates diesel-powered off-road vehicles in California (except for agricultural or personal use, or for use at ports or intermodal railyards) with engines of 25 horsepower (hp) or greater should attend, including out-of-state companies doing business in California.

The regulation applies to self-propelled diesel-fueled vehicles that cannot be registered and licensed to drive on-road. It also applies to some vehicles licensed to drive on-road such as workover rigs and other vehicles that were designed for off-road use and have off-road engines. Examples include loaders, crawler tractors, skid steers, backhoes, forklifts, and airport ground support equipment. The regulation does not apply to stationary equipment or portable equipment such as generators.

If you attended one of training sessions held during summer of 2008, there is no need to attend the 4-hour training session because it will be nearly identical to the previous training.
